I published eight books with the machine.

So this is not a book written from outside it. What I saw comes first and what I asked comes after, across five parts and eighteen chapters.

What is it made of. Is there a difference between a person and that which does not wear away. What happens if it passes us. Then what about people.

Where no answer came, the place was left empty rather than smoothed over. Those empty places are the most important thing in the book.
