LOOP CHRONICLES

BOOK SIX

The Unsigned Book

Nobody is ever wronged in the Equity. Nobody decided anything, either.

Hora gets her committee seat for no reason at all: someone quit and her number came up. She has one habit — she reads things to the end — and so she reads a deliberation to its last line and understands what it will do to eleven hundred and forty people.

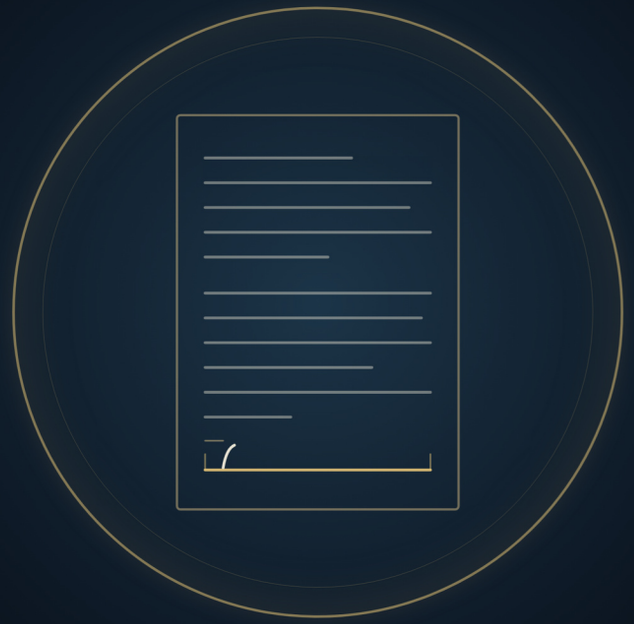

Four hundred and thirty-two people were involved. Every one tells her the truth: I only passed it on. At the bottom of every document there is a box for a signature, and it has never once been filled.
