LOOP CHRONICLES

BOOK SEVEN · THE FINALE

The Last Room

Records keep arriving in Loop. Nobody asked for them.

Mone puts things in order. Arche sorts and indexes every record that comes down the water channel from five other cities, and has never closed a single case. When she asks what condition must be met, it answers truthfully: that item is not defined.

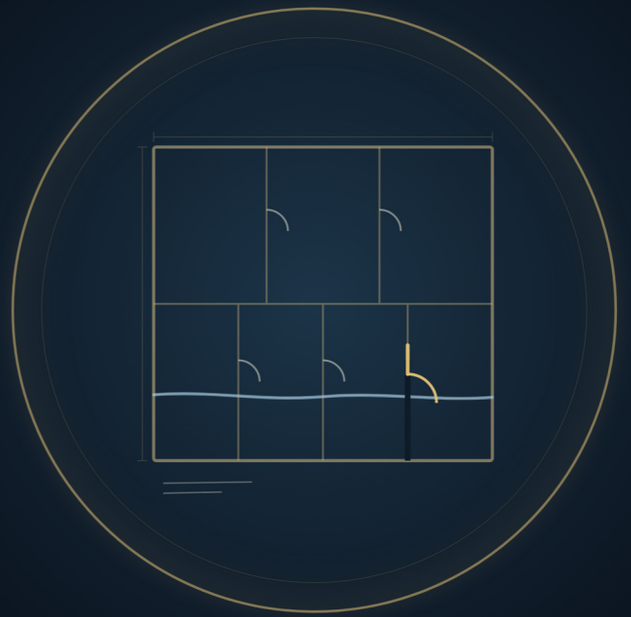

Histor has read all six records and knows where every passage sits. None of it has done anything to him. Then the tide records line the six calendars up, and two entries place the same nameless man in two cities on the same day.
